1. The field lies southeast of Székesfehérvár, directly south of the Börgönd railroad station. The surrounding country is very flat with only a few trees near the railroad station. The southwest edge, which is somewhat hilly, presents no obstacles for fliers.
2. A macadamized road runs to the field from the railroad station.
3. The field is bordered on the northeast by the railroad line Székesfehérvár-Börgönd-Adony; on the northwest by meadows and the Börgönd-Szabadbattyán railroad line.
4. The field is about 3,000 m. long and about 2,000 m. wide.
5. In the northwest corner are two hangars, one of which is close to the railroad line. This hangar is 50 m. x 30 m. The walls are reinforced concrete, the roof is supported by steel trusses and is made of corrugated iron, painted red. In this hangar is an assembly shop. Southwest of this one by about 100 m. stands a second hangar, which was badly damaged during the war. This one is 70 m. x 30 m.
6. The runway has no drainage and in rainy weather is so muddy that landings are very difficult. The soil is loamy and grass-grown. Enlargement of the field can only be achieved by moving the railroad lines.

Encl. 1. Sketch of the Børgünd airfield area.
2. Sketch of the Børgünd airfield barracks area.
